

Morgan Lewis Adds Partner To Insurance Recovery Practice

By Hope Patti

Law360 (February 21, 2025, 4:06 PM EST) -- Morgan Lewis & Bockius LLP announced that it has added a new partner and insurance expert in its Chicago office, in a move to bolster the firm's insurance recovery and dispute resolution capabilities for corporate policyholder clients.

Emily Garrison represents corporate policyholders across all sectors in coverage disputes involving general, directors and officers, cyber, professional, employment practices and environmental liabilities, the firm said. Garrison also manages all aspects of coverage litigation, arbitration and mediation with insurers, in addition to advising clients on insurance coverage, according to Friday's news release.

Emily Garrison

"This is such a great opportunity," Garrison told Law360 Pulse on Friday, touting the firm's victories for global and Fortune 500 clients, as well as its broad geographical reach and collaborative environment.

Garrison added that she is excited to integrate her insurance litigation and counseling practice into an already experienced team of attorneys, and expand the capabilities of the group, both in Chicago and across the globe.

"Emily's arrival bolsters our capabilities to address multifaceted issues with precision and creativity in an increasingly complex risk landscape," said firm chair Jami McKeon.

Garrison earned her undergraduate degree from Johns Hopkins University and her law degree from the Northwestern University Pritzker School of Law. She most recently worked on insurance recovery cases at Honigman LLP.

"I'm a 2008 law grad, so I graduated during an interesting time in the world," Garrison said. "I luckily found this practice area that is so great to work in because I can represent all types of corporate policyholders in a broad range of sectors."

Garrison said she is looking forward to continuing her work to help clients recover their insurance proceeds and address risks that are of key concern for corporations these days, such as climate change and environmental liabilities, and cybersecurity and data privacy.

"Our insurance coverage practice has seen tremendous growth, and Emily's arrival continues that momentum," Troy S. Brown, leader of the firm's global litigation practice, said.

"Emily's extensive knowledge across the spectrum of policyholder disputes and counseling, combined with her industry reputation and entrepreneurial drive, further enhances the breadth of services our market-leading insurance recovery practice offers to clients," Brown added.

--Editing by Bruce Goldman.

All Content © 2003-2025, Portfolio Media, Inc.